The original temple had no niche for the vices that have been therein enthroned, no pedestal on which class legislation could be created no after upon which the monsters who buy had not seen that upon which the monsters who buy had not man could offer up their unholy the mortifices, and never was it intended that, beneath its portice, Wrong should be enacted into a simule, and held up for the worthip of mankind. We all know how that mankind. We all know how that see has talled how algority and metally; how it has been the loud fer of the principles upon which in built; how it has become an oppressor and a tyrant, the parent of ma-government and the defender of the crust-est and most monstrous wrong of all the it failed.

The war which has equeed such an up-heaval and such profound revolutions in the action of parties, has not touched the so-salled Democracy with a more feather. So rotten a thing could not stand the shock of the encounter with a betrayed people. It has been virtually dissolved. A few base mea, mainly traiters, have seized upon its machinery, and, with the art and ability that would have advanced a rood cause. machinery, and, with the art and ability that would have advanced a good cause, have made it as engine of mischief, threatening at one time, so potent were their falselaceds and cospections their professions to destroy the Government and bring in anarchy for the cursing of the land. But it is a sign of health in the hoay, politic, accepted with thankfulness, that, in this crisis, other men who have saved the purity from their consentity, who, in spite of its practices and changed beliefs, have secured its triumpha, have stepped forward to restandards which now aftern traitorous camps, and to make it a helper in the regeneration of the Republic. We hid them God speed in this generous and patriotic work. They may not be able to attain the rood that Mr. Jesferson saw after of the standard of t the street of the trial of Democratic theories is yet possible. And we doubt not they will. But they must preach the tree faith, and all the faith. Any reservations in favor of that old tyranny that opportunity of the possible of the party—any lingering love for the poison which has corrupted and well night described the country, will be stall. True Democracy—the right of each man to own himself,—and American slavery,—the right of our man to own all other men whom he can buy—are as incompatible as life and death; and in this rearful struggle, one or the other of these must go down. It is probably reserved for the War Democrate of the Terrhense to choose between the two states of the Terrhense to choose between the two states of the Terrhense to choose between the two states of the Terrhense to choose between the two states of the Terrhense to choose, not only for these two the control of the two the control of the two two the control of the two two the control of the Terrhense to the Terrhense Justice to Cen.
